

Abstract

The present invention relates to the use of live attenuated bacteria for the manufacture of a vaccine for submucosal administration .